Dear Parents and Friends,

Remember what last summer looked like? Remember the uncertainty for schools as we moved into the fall?

What a relief it is to begin a summer with a good part of this worry past us. While the pandemic is not over, the collective efforts of our state and our community kept us all safe, providing us the ability to move forward through the challenges of the last fifteen months.

We at the Rutland City Public Schools want to extend the greatest thanks to our community for collaborating together to bring us to the conclusion of a successful school year.

Thank you for being patient.
Thank you for your attention to the health guidance.
Thank you for working together with us.

Thank you for supporting our students and our schools.

We are very proud that our staff and students committed to in-person instruction through the year. That would not have happened without your help and your backing.

Thank you.

There will be more news to come as we shift into the new year. We are working hard to support and help our students grow, especially if the pandemic year left any student with new challenges. But for this moment, we simply want to show our appreciation for the continued care that the Rutland community provides our young people through our schools.

We wish you an enjoyable summer!

Sincerely,

Bill Olsen, Superintendent
